3. Select your date, click done and when you're returned to the previous screen click on the Search button.

The screenshot shows a flight search interface for the route Lisbon to Denver on Monday, June 3. The search filters are set to 'All filters'. Below the filters, there are options to 'Track prices' (set to Jun 3) and 'Any dates'. The 'Best flights' section lists three options:

Flight Details	Duration	Stops	Emissions	Price
12:35 PM – 8:45 AM* Azores Airlines, JetBlue - Operated by White Airw...	27 hr 10 min	2 stops PDL, BOS	626 kg CO2e -6% emissions	€443
10:25 AM – 5:58 PM United - Brussels Airlines	14 hr 33 min	1 stop 2 hr 30 min EWR	600 kg CO2e -10% emissions	€843
11:25 AM – 6:15 PM Aer Lingus	13 hr 50 min	1 stop 1 hr 15 min DUB	771 kg CO2e +16% emissions	€933

From here, you can see the airline options, where the stops are and the layover durations. You can select your preferred itinerary and go to booking from here, or you can track the prices of flights for your preferred itinerary.

4. To track prices, highlight the track prices button and you'll receive emails when prices fluctuate (a lot of them) until the date of your trip is in the past. Alternatively, you can use the "any dates" button to get emails when prices fluctuate just based on your departure and arrival cities.

This screenshot is identical to the previous one, but with an annotation. A blue callout box with the text "Track prices here." points to the "Track prices" button, which is currently set to "Jun 3". Below the flight list, a dark notification box states: "You'll get emails when prices change for Jun 3. View X".

The price graph option is more accurate the sooner your flight is. The farther out you go it isn't super reliable unless you are booking your flight at the moment you do the search.
